

DEADBEATZ

BluesPunk from Austria

This is a short story about a long beard. A small story about a big incident that formed the style of this band.

A tale about two guys with a bass, harmonica, drums and a singer with the above-mentioned long beard.

Two guys on a mission to prove the world how powerful the blues can be.

Teaching their audience "no guitar player needed".

Many years ago, they once had a guitar player. One night, they were left with no money left to bail him out in that small town. With a number of empty whiskey bottles left in a destroyed hotelroom, there was no going back. They were left to their own unique sound.

Small band with a big sound. No guitar player needed.

Let them BLOW YOU AWAY!!!

What you hear ISN'T what you get! You'll get a lot more here! Equipped only with a small "orchestra", (drums, harmonica, double bass and vocals), these 2 guys deliver blues at it's best.

Pure, raw, and hard-hittin'!

Drummer David Karlinger concentrates on his harmonica chops in this band and works the drums with his feet. Bernie Miller slaps that double bass and is the man on the microphone as well.

If you don't believe that these two aren't enough to produce a forceful sound then you should witness the next live show of the two...